ZELENKOVAC ECOLOGICAL ZONE

Painter Borislav Janković decided in 1985 to transform an old watermill he inherited from his father to a small art gallery. As years passed, his initiative started to gain attention from Yugoslavian and European artists. After the 90's conflict, it appeared to be crucial to protect the surrounding nature. The ecological NGO Zelenkovac Ekološki Pokret was, thus created in 1997.

Nowadays, Zelenkovac has three main goals:

- Ecological action: Protect the surrounding environment, including the river, the woods and the wild life and make visitors aware of environmental issues
- Cultural development: Expose local and international artists, offer a place for traditional cultural events and organize the annual jazz festival in addition to other smaller concerts and events all along the year
- Sustainable tourism: Host tourists from all around the world in several traditional wooden cottages built around the art gallery building and create a link between the local community and foreigners
